ADDISON PALMER

Addison Palmer III was born in Savannah, Georgia. He has spent most of his life on the coast of South Carolina on Hilton Head Island. He has been a gifted artist since he was a child, constantly drawing and painting the world around him. Addison was born into a family of creative people--his father, Jim Palmer, a painter and his uncle, Walter Palmer, a sculptor. After graduating from high school, he attended Brevard College majoring in art but also was a stand out distance runner.

After leaving Brevard, Addison moved to St. Simons Island, Georgia, where he opened up his own gallery in 1994. From that point he has been painting wildlife and landscapes scenes for people around the world. He helps support local and national organizations to keep the beauty that he paints around him.

Addison is invited to teach art and to demonstrate his work around the world on cruise lines like Cunard and Seabourn.

You can find Addison's original artwork at the Red Piano Art Gallery on Hilton Head Island, the Anderson Fine Art Gallery on St. Simons Island, Georgia, the Sheldon Fine Art Galleries in Naples, Florida, and Newport, Rhode Island, the Germanton Art Gallery in Germanton, North Carolina, and the Village Smith Gallery in Winston Salem, North Carolina.
